Iraq: On The Brink

were scheduled as soldiers continued to leave to face the Iraqi army amassed at the Kuwaiti border.

U.S. soldiers dispatched to force Iraqi pullback

by Eileen Alt Powell

KUWAIT -- Iraq declared an end to its menacing five-day buildup and said its troops were pulling back from the Kuwait border only hours after U.S. troops landed.

President Clinton said Monday night there had been no sign of an Iraqi pullback and that he was sending more than 350 U.S. military aircraft to the Persian Gulf.

"We will not allow Saddam Hussein to defy the will of the United States and the international community," Clinton said in a nationally televised address.

A senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton ordered B-52 bombers and F-15E fighter jets to the Gulf. They are to come from various Air Force bases, including those in Germany and Italy.

The tens of thousands of Iraqi soldiers sent to the border had revived memories of 1990, when Iraq swept aside Kuwait's army and seized the oil-rich country. It was seven months before a U.S.-led coalition ousted the occupants.

This time, Washington was determined to send a firm signal. Washington began amassing a sent to a site north of Basra.

In Baghdad, Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf said troops would be deployed to "other locations in the rear" to finish military exercises.

He told the official Iraqi news agency the withdrawal was ordered in response to appeals from "friends" and "in view of the fact that the troops' presence might be used as a pretext to maintain sanctions."

The crushing U.N. sanctions were imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990.

Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein may have conceived the buildup as a warning that he could still cause trouble if the sanctions were not lifted.

Clinton said the sanctions will be maintained until Iraq complies with U.N. resolutions.

"That is the answer to Iraq's sanctions problem: full compliance, not reckless provocation," Clinton said.

Kuwait's information minister, Sheik Saud al-Sabah, said there was no evidence Iraq had begun pulling back any of the estimated 80,000 soldiers on the border. "We will believe it when we see it," he said.

Israel promises Syrian safety

by Barry Schweld
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM -- Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin promised security and dignity to Syria and its people Monday as a terrorist attack and Iraqi troop movements shadowed the start of a new round of diplomacy by Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

Christopher pledged that the United States would stand firmly with Israel against terrorists, who he said wanted to kill the peace process as well as innocent civilians. He said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "would not be permitted to intimidate the people of Kuwait or the people of this region."

The terrorist attack here that left two dead and 13 injured, including an American diplomat, underscored Israel's obsession with security, and Rabin in a gesture to Syria recognized its importance to the Arab country as well.

He said the peace Israel seeks was one that "brings about normalization and security to both our countries, and it has to be

Coming Out Day perfect for society

In a perfect world, coming out of the closet wouldn't mean a thing. It wouldn't mean a thing because just as heterosexuals date, gays, lesbians and bisexuals would date whomever they want, whenever they're ready.

Just as heterosexuals become sexually active, gay people would become sexually active -- when they're ready. Just as heterosexuals marry, gay people would marry if they choose.

In a perfect world, heterosexuals would not be insulted when someone of the same sex asked them out, they would be flattered -- just as they are when someone of the opposite sex asks them out. Why? When people ask other people to go to dinner or to a movie, they do it because they think a person is nice or beautiful or intelligent or friendly. It's a flattering thing.

In a perfect world, a man or woman who does not wish to date a member of the same sex would politely decline, without anger or condescension.

In a perfect world, a heterosexual man would not be afraid to live with and/or shower in the same room with a gay man, because he would not be so self-absorbed as to assume that the gay man was automatically attracted to him.

In a perfect world, sexuality would not be such a taboo subject or an issue that makes so many people uncomfortable to discuss or face.

Unfortunately, there is no such thing as a perfect world, so we have National Coming Out Day for anyone who may be intimidated by the screwed-up world we know as reality. This is the day for all of us to come to terms with who we are sexually and for our family, friends and co-workers to do the same.

The News believes people -- heterosexual, homosexual and bisexual -- should realize that no matter what our personal feelings about sexuality are, we should respect the feelings of others, as well. People should recognize National Coming Out Day as an opportunity to reflect on the reasons why this isn't a perfect world and what they can do to make it a better one.

It is also a day to come to terms with our sexuality and reveal those terms to others. We should learn to appreciate one another's differences and respect one another regardless of what those differences are, sexual or otherwise.

Women will continue to be angry

"Why not write a  nice column; you sound so angry sometimes."

"Boy, she's a man-hating bitch."

"No one is going to listen if she presents her views in such a harsh way."

These are examples of feedback in regard to my column. I get comments like this when I address feminist issues or subjects concerning women on campus, such as my "Rape-Free BG a Dangerous Lie" in last Wednesday's paper.

My best columns, I feel, are the ones that stem from things that affect me in a personal way. The writing usually proves easier when I feel particularly passionate about a certain issue.

Ironically, those columns are usually the ones that provoke the most criticism.

This column is about an angry woman.

If a woman wishes to express anger or frustration, she is momentarily leaving the bounds of her esteemed place in society.

She is supposed to clean the boat and maintain the harmony within, not rock it. She should be a mother, a peacemaker, level-headed and soothing. Women who assert themselves betray these assigned gender roles.

They upset the order of our culture which, traditionally, states that women are to be subservient and lady-like.

Men are encouraged to openly express anger as a symbol of their masculine assertiveness. In some situations, it may be viewed as an asset, as in the case of war, for example.

But a woman who expresses frustration is immediately a target of ridicule.

She may be labeled a nag, a bitch, a castrator, a man-hater, neurotic or irrational. She has expressed a concern which would require change.

Labeling her as "rebellious" or "unfeminine" rips her from an accepted place in society, where she is supposed to be comfortable and fulfilled. Sometimes this is enough to make a woman doubt herself and shrink back to a more accepted position. The cycle then begins again.

In order to dominate someone, it is common practice to make him or her feel powerless.

A powerless, subservient female is in her place and controllable. She may be depressed, self-doubting and unsure, but she is where she is "supposed" to be nevertheless.

A woman who expresses a sense of power upsets the tradition of male dominance. The power to complain is traditionally man's work. In the fraternal tradition of politics, it is also a man's job to amend his own frustration. An angry woman is a threat to this monopolized power.

Anger is a natural emotion. Its presence serves a purpose. Anger is a signal that something is awry, and it is a source of personal pain.

A woman who is angry is angry for a reason.

Possibly, she's feeling out of control, watching others make most or all of the decisions that affect her. Possibly, she is tired of watching others accomplish, leaving her unfulfilled and unsatisfied. Perhaps she is tired of being misjudged, misrepresented, labeled and dominated in almost every aspect of her life. Anger may be a signal that a woman is tired of giving so much of herself with nothing returned to grow on.

Anger may be a sign of exhaustion. A woman may feel run down by demands and fatigued by the force of her frustration. Society has such a stronghold on what women are supposed to be and feel it is difficult sometimes to even realize when we are angry.

Traditionally, a woman's role in our society serves a definite purpose. She accentuates the man -- his home, his possessions -- and she is mainly responsible for the rearing of the children.

Being human is more than filling a niche.

Criticism has been delivered to me outright; blatant protest to my meaning or style. Some have opted to criticize bits and pieces, like the reliability of my sources or the validity of the statistics I present.

Sometimes I do come off as angry; maybe I am angry.

Last week my column was criticized by a lot of people who can stroll across campus anytime without fear. They will never be stripped of that privilege and probably will never experience the threat of being attacked, overpowered and violated.

The reality is that women will continue to be angry because there is much to be angry about.

I am not irrational, unfeminine or rebellious. From all sides I am pressured to be a "good little lady" and sit quietly on the sidelines and cheer on the true decision makers.

You can keep your pom-poms.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Statistics about rape tainted by press

This is in reference to Andrea Wood's column about rape in last Wednesday's edition of The News. I would like to take this opportunity to refute some of Wood's comments.

First of all, if she keeps writing articles telling the entire campus and city of Bowling Green that she is afraid to go out after dark, then she is simply inviting rape into her dorm room.

As for the most recent statistics showing that one third of all women are being raped... How were these statistics figured? Were they projected statistics done by sociologists?

I've also read statistics that state that L.A., New York, Dallas and Washington D.C. has record murder rates in 1994; of course, they neglect to mention that they also have record populations.

It's pointless to use projected statistics or statistics at all. Statistics are the easiest thing to manipulate.

This survey that states that 51 percent of males would rape if they thought they could get away with it is not true. Nor is it ironic that the "vast majority of victims know their attacker." Please, date rape is quickly becoming a cry-wolf syndrome.

A girl goes out on a date with Joe Cool, they end up having sex, and then she goes home to her dorm room. While talking to her roommate, she admits she wasn't too keen on having sex with him but thought he might not go out with her again if she didn't.

The roommate says that if she didn't want to have sex with him she was raped; she should report it immediately.

It wasn't that she was raped, it's simply that she changed her mind and is looking for some recourse to her stupid actions. People wonder why the police are so lenient or they think that "forcible rape is one of the most falsely reported crimes."

Wood also states that rape is occurring in our dorm rooms, in our cars, in our fraternities and sororities and on our campus. Yet, at the end, she contradicted herself by stating that she has "yet to hear about a single rape occurring within the realm of this University."

I think Wood should proofread her articles before submission. I also think maybe she forgot to read the article in The Columbus Dispatch about the safest communities in Ohio.

The only town safer than Bowling Green is Oxford, Ohio. Maybe this is why she hasn't heard of a single rape within the realm of the University. Maybe she just didn't dig deep enough.

Wood also attacks men for the one thing that we have always depended on them for -- their masculinity. Society is turning men into drivelling fools that are afraid to show their masculinity around women.

She also stated that she is afraid to walk around campus at night because she knows she cannot defend herself. If she walks around with another girl, does she think that female will be able to defend her or will she need a male escort?

She'll use their masculinity when it's convenient for her, but when it's not convenient she wants them to be just as feminine as she.

Wake up, Andrea!

Last, but not least, there are 9,000 female students on this campus. You talk for one of them, not all 9,000 of them. So, "we are women who fear walking around at night" is in reference to you and only you. If you're quoting someone else, that's fine, but you didn't.

Allegations should be handled differently

I feel it necessary to respond to the articles about hazing in The News last week.

I agree that Interfraternity Council should be notified in the instance of hazing allegations. What I find amazing is that IFC wants to put itself in a potentially dangerous position.

I have been in the Greek system. I have heard the hazing stories from friends and relatives. We know it happens, we have all seen the horror stories of deaths, disfigurements, etc...

The potential for lawsuits is enormous, and for the Interfraternity Council to want to include themselves in that lawsuit loop seems to me to not be a rational decision.

They are lucky that there is an office on this campus that takes the responsibility of investigating and ruling on hazing charges out of their hands.

Imagine the potential for suit if a member of the accused fraternity is on Interfraternity Council, therefore having a voice in the investigation, and the charged fraternity is found innocent?

There should be other solutions to this issue. Possibly a committee of Greeks, non-Greeks and the director or assistant director of Greek Life could be the investigators of these unfortunate incidents.

One thing that was forgotten, and surprisingly so, is the fact that [they are] hazing their new members. Until we as students and as members of these organizations commit to stopping the unnecessary "traditional" hazing that happens every year, there will continue to be problems such as the issue Interfraternity Council is dealing with now. Isn't it time we all start respecting ourselves and each other enough to put an end to hazing?

Events celebrate gay awareness

by Genell Pavellich
The BG News

As part of Gay Awareness Month, University students and people across the country will celebrate National Coming Out Day today.

The intent of recognizing the day at the University is so students will be more aware of gay and lesbian issues, according to Carolyn Conrad, adviser to the Lesbian and Gay Alliance.

Throughout the day, there will be an information table in the University Union and signs throughout campus.

Conrad said she hopes students will be more aware of gay issues today and actually discuss them in their classes.

"[National] Coming Out Day is a celebration for gay students

Coming Out Day, discussions key factors in month's agenda across the nation," she said.

In addition to Coming Out Day, the University will offer programs and events all month to help educate students, Conrad said.

The programs are to help students learn more and increase their acceptance of gays, lesbians and bisexuals, she said.

"This helps give increased awareness about a population that does exist on this campus," Conrad said.

Jeanne Wright, health education director, said the Wellness Center is assisting with bulletin board promotions within the residence halls during the month.

There is also going to be a panel discussion tonight on relationships for interested male students. The discussion will include heterosexual as well as gay relationships, Wright said.

"With any relationship issue, students need to have an understanding of others," Wright said. "That way they can appreciate people for differences as well as similarities."

The panel discussion about relationships will take place at 9 p.m. in Room 1007 of the Business Administration Building.

There are also information files at the Well for interested students who want to learn more about gay issues.

The events during the month are available so students can have questions answered and have a support network, Conrad said.

Later in the month, UAO and LAGA are co-sponsoring a panel discussion open to University students. The exact date of the panel has not yet been decided.

Gay awareness is an important issue because it is one many students need to deal with, Conrad said.

"Everybody knows someone who is gay, whether they are aware of it or not," she said. "We need to find it in our hearts to be more accepting."

For more information on LAGA or any of the events offered during the month, contact Conrad at 372-0289.

USG bill focuses on parking lots, commuter safety

by Robin Coe
The BG News

Undergraduate Student Government engaged in its first legislative action of the academic year at Monday night's meeting by discussing a new bill and communications with the student body.

The bill was sponsored by senators Brian Dicken, Jake Willis, Jeremy Foltz and Mike Schaller.

"I'm encouraged that we actually had our first legislation today," USG President Jennifer Mathe said.

The University is considering removing Lot 13, located on the west side of the Eppler Sports Complex, and replacing it with grass to create a pedestrian walkway from Lot A to Ridge Street. The bill rejects these considerations.

"Parking is always a major concern on campus. That's an issue Senator Dicken has been taking on since his first day in office," said Jeff Stefancic, chief legislative officer. "I think those are pretty valuable parking spaces there."

The nearest commuter lot is Lot 7, behind Offenhauer Towers, which places a limit on parking available near academic buildings and a safety problem for students with night classes, according to Senate Bill 94-95-1.

"I would support any legislation that has safety as its ultimate goal," Mathe said. She said the new express shuttle route is also available to carry students to remote parking areas.

"My interpretation of the legislation is that if there is more parking available in a central location, [then] people will have a closer walk at night," she said.

She added that she has not had a chance to research the motivations behind the Uni-

Chinese artist combines East, West

by Julie Hamilton
The BG News

A well-known artist from China depicts birds and flowers in a brightness he said he believes encompasses the Western style, and he has brought his vision to the University.

Bao Sheng Liu, vice president and professor at the Xi'an Academy of Fine Arts, has his work displayed at the McFall Center Gallery through Oct. 16. The exhibit can be seen Monday through Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Admission is free.

"The brightness of these paintings are my digestion of Western style," Liu said.

Liu was trained at the Xi'an Academy of Fine Arts in the 1950s in both Western and Eastern art. Liu is recognized as one of the best artists in China, as he is renowned for prints, oil paintings and watercolors.

All of his works symbolize good fortune, good health or abundant happiness.

Liu said his goal is to incorporate Eastern art into the Western world while learning more about the Western tradition of art.

"My aim is to introduce traditional Chinese flower and bird art," Liu said through a translator. "My aim is also to learn more about Western art."

Best known for bird and flower art, Liu specializes in painting roosters, peacocks and peonies.

"When I paint the young roosters I am thinking of small boys, and as I paint the peacock I think of a bride in a white wedding dress," Liu said. "The peonies are beautiful girls."

Liu said by drawing this way his flowers and birds are more vivid.

Liu's style has been greatly influenced by two Italian priests, who trained Liu's teacher.

"I use light and very bright colors which are very Western," Liu said. "It gives you a feeling of strong sun."

Traditional Chinese art doesn't have the brightness of Western art. Liu said he sees his art as a combination of Western and Eastern styles, but it is his Shi'an style exhibit visitors said they admired.

"Western art does not emphasize this kind of painting," said Wally Pretzer, retired coordinator of the English As a Second Language program. "The key feature is he wants to depict real nature. He goes out to look at the peonies before painting."

This is Professor Liu's first trip to the West. He was supposed to come for an exhibit in 1993 but was denied a visa.

"We are happy to finally have him over here to enjoy his work," said Diane Pretzer, retired chairwoman of the Department of Romance Languages.

"You'd never find something like [Liu's art] here," said Les Barber, coordinator of the Shi'an-Bowling Green exchange program.

The newly re-appointed graduate student representative to the Board of Trustees intends to be sympathetic to the needs of non-traditional students.

Alvin Heard, a graduate fellow in industrial and organizational psychology, was appointed to a two-year term by Ohio Governor George Voinovich.

Heard will be representing the interests and concerns of the graduate student body to the Board.

Heard said a large number of the graduate students are non-traditional students like himself.

"Sometimes the University forgets that a large number of its students are non-traditional," Heard said. "I'm married and have two kids myself, so I understand the different needs of the non-traditional students."

Heard is not a stranger to the Board of Trustees. He served on the Board from 1993-94 when he was tapped to fill the unexpired term of former Graduate Student Senate President Tony Fluellen.

Heard said he was pleased with what he accomplished during the eight months he originally served on the Board.

"I'm very pleased that I was able to take part in reforming health care for graduate students," Heard said. "Those reforms spilled over and ended up helping undergraduate students as well."

Heard said one of his main goals for his new term will be working to end the restrictions that prohibit graduate students from working off campus. Current University policy states that graduate students are only allowed to work 20 hours a week at outside jobs.

Jodi Chappell has served for the last year as the other University student trustee. Chappell said she was glad to see Heard get re-appointed.

"[Heard] deserved to have an appointment of his own when you look at the work and dedication he's put in," Chappell said.

Military leader resigns, leaves Haiti

by David Beard
The Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Raoul Cedras kept the people cowed for three years with his terror campaign. On Monday, Haiti's masses rose up and drowned him out.

Cedras seemed small in the entranceway of army headquarters as he announced he was resigning as military leader and quitting the country for its own good.

Cedras was dwarfed by U.S. military commander Hugh Shelton, whose 19,500 soldiers played a large role in finally driving out the Haitian coup leader.

The sound of 5,000 joyful people buried the tubas and trombones of Cedras' military band playing the national anthem with an impromptu version of "Auld Lang Syne."

Then Cedras' voice faded amid an underamplified sound system and the crowd's shouts of "Hoodlum!" and "Thief!"

The American troops had to protect Cedras, firing warning shots when a rock-thrower shattered the windshield of his departing Toyota Land Cruiser. Haitians scrambled to pick up shards of the broken windshield as souvenirs.

"I have chosen to leave the country to protect you, so that my presence will not be a pretext for unjustified acts," Cedras told the crowd.

As a result of Lt. Gen. Cedras' resignation, the final condition has been met by the Haitian military leadership to comply with the terms of the agreement former President Carter worked out only hours before a U.S. invasion was to begin.

Cedras is gone, so too is Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, who resigned Saturday. Port-au-Prince police chief Michel Francois escaped in the dark last week to the neighboring Dominican Republic.

Cedras gave no time or venue for his exile, but U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager listed Argentina, Panama, Spain or Venezuela as possible refuges. Schrager did not rule out the United States.

The crowd continually shouted the name of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the man Cedras overthrew in September 1991.

U.S. State Department officials say Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president, will end his own exile and return home Saturday.

Cedras said he decided to "sacrifice" himself to save Haiti.

"There's a lot more Haitians who want to sacrifice him," said said Hill, 22, of Pembroke, Mass.

Hundreds of singing, branch-waving Haitians streamed up the hill to Cedras' neighborhood in suburban Petionville afterwards. The crowds included carnival lar commercial service until Wednesday; an airline employee on the tarmac, questioned by The Associated Press, said only that the Boeing 727-200 jetliner "was for a special purpose."

"We are here to physically and morally uproot the army," said Josue Joseph, first-secretary of the Central Movement of Peasants.

Joseph, 38, had been in hiding while military-tolerated thugs killed some 3,000 people, kidnapped hundreds more and extorted money and goods from many of Haiti's people.

The ceremony came nearly a year to the day since Cedras reneged on a U.N. plan for his replacement, when Cedras' allies staged a demonstration that persuaded President Clinton to withdraw the USS Harlan County.

"I have chosen to leave the country to protect you, so that my presence will not be a pretext for unjustified acts."

Hundreds more Haitians celebrated in anticipation at the international airport, where U.S. military planes and the first American Airlines jetliner in months waited on the tarmac.

U.S. forces continued to arrive Monday to confront the estimated 64,000 Iraqi troops. An estimated 700 Iraqi tanks and other armored vehicles also were believed to be at the border.

In Kuwait City, some 300 men from the 24th Infantry Division came aboard a white Lockheed 1011 jet from Fort Stewart, Ga.

Army Maj. Gen. John Taylor, who will command the force, shook the hand of each infantryman as the unit arrived.

A veteran of the 1991 Gulf War, Taylor said the arriving troops would man M1A1 Abrams tanks and Bradley fighting vehicles "prepositioned" in the region after the Gulf War.

"Everybody is very confident," he said. "We know what our mission is."

Taylor said some advance American teams were "digging in the desert right now," implying that forces already had been deployed in northern Kuwait. He refused to elaborate.

He declined to say how many troops were expected. Pentagon officials had said the United States was assembling nearly 70,000 ground, air and sea forces. The U.S. Embassy confirmed

Monday that American warships led by the USS Tripoli arrived off the Kuwait coast over the weekend with 2,000 combat Marines. The aircraft carrier USS George Washington began patrolling the Red Sea on Monday.

Britain dispatched the frigate HMS Cornwall to Kuwaiti waters on Sunday. Turkey and Saudi Arabia have offered staging areas for some 180 American warplanes and support craft expected in the region over the next few days.

Earlier, Kuwait's crown prince told an emergency session of parliament that Kuwaitis have nothing to fear with the Western forces arriving to counter the Iraqi buildup of forces.

done maintaining the dignity of our peoples and our countries together."

His statement at a news conference was a gesture to Damascus in the sphere of "public diplomacy," which has shown more progress recently than the negotiations over the future of the Golan Heights.

"The problem of the negotiation with Syria remains unsolved yet," Rabin said. "There are gaps between the positions between Syria and Israel."

Christopher is hoping public gestures will inspire confidence on both sides and produce the compromises needed for an accord.

He declined to say whether Rabin or Foreign Minister Shimon Peres made any new proposals for him to take to Damascus on Tuesday. "You will have to understand that it would make it impossible for me to do my job well if I were to indicate what the proposals were, or even if there were new proposals," Christopher said.

Last week, on a visit to Washington, the Syrian foreign minister, Farouk Sharaa, took questions from Israeli reporters at a news conference, gave an interview to Israel television and met with leaders of the American Jewish community.

Christopher praised Sharaa's moves as an important first step, but steered clear of the foreign minister's assertions that Syria had never attacked Israel and that it did not give refuge to terrorist groups.

At the same time, Christopher called on Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to respond to the terrorist attack Sunday night near Zion Square with "a strong condemnation."

The loosening of the Arab economic boycott of Israel is another step in the process that Christopher and other State Department officials hope eventually will produce a peace treaty, though they are now saying the negotiations could drag on into 1995.

Christopher's six-day trip is distracted by the movement of Iraqi troops toward the Kuwaiti border. He will go to Kuwait on Wednesday to talk to leaders of the oil-rich emirate and to underscore U.S. support for the country that a U.S.-led military force liberated from Iraqi annexation in 1991.

Within hours after U.S. troops began landing in Kuwait, Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations announced that Iraqi forces were being pulled back from the border.

versity's ideas. However, she said she supports the bill at this point.

"The idea behind it is very sound and one I would support," Mathe said.

During USG members' office hours, each member will be required to call 30 people each week for Phone Power, a research tool used by USG to keep in contact with students' opinions.

"The one thing we've been accused of neglecting has been the general student's opinion," Mathe said. "This is a superior way to meliorate that so we're in touch with fully 1,000 students."

Tonight at 9 p.m. in Room 112 of the Life Sciences Building there will be a joint meeting to recruit volunteers and describe volunteer activities and responsibilities. Student concerns regarding potential renovations of the University Union will also be addressed.

An open Students for Students forum will also take place to allow USG and other University organizations and students to discuss future legislation, needs and concerns and to give USG members feedback.

BG soccer squads drops close contest to Hoosiers

by John Boyle
The BG News

The Bowling Green soccer squad couldn't overcome an early Indiana goal and lost a hard-fought 1-0 struggle to the No. 1 Hoosiers Sunday at Bloomington.

Forward Craig Ginberg's goal at the 7:24 mark proved to be enough for IU, which improved to 10-1 on the season.

"We gave them everything that they could handle," BG head coach Gary Palmisano said. "And I think they walked off the pitch feeling fortunate the game did not go into overtime."

The Falcons couldn't make the most of the few offensive opportunities afforded them by the Hoosiers. Forward Tim Concannon missed from point-blank range just three minutes into the match.

"Concannon took a shot, from probably two or three yards out to the goalkeeper's right, that skimmed across the goal mouth and brushed the post," Palmisano said.

"A lot of times, when two good teams get on the field, there aren't going to be many great chances, and it's crucial that you capitalize on them. We had our best chance three minutes in, but we didn't capitalize on it."

For the game, the Falcons held the Hoosiers to just 13 shots, the Hoosiers' lowest output of the season. BG only registered nine shots on the goal but controlled much of the action late in the game, Palmisano said.

"There were long stretches of time in the second half where we had the ball in their half of the field, and they could not get the ball out," he said. "When they did knock the ball out, either David [Michels], Tony [Dore] or Peter [Kolp], with great poise, would possess it... and find an open player."

With the loss, the Falcons drop to fifth in the Great Lakes Region. All of BG's losses have come at the hands of ranked teams. Loyola, Md. was No. 17 and Marquette No. 23 when they defeated the Falcons.

Palmisano said before the Marquette and Indiana games that he would learn more about this year's squad.

What exactly did he find out? That it's time to play Akron.

"I think we are exactly where we need to be going in to play Akron," he said. "If you're within 100 miles of Akron, Ohio, come Friday night."

Falcon volleyballers split matches during road trip

by John Gibney
The BG News

On the brink of a winless weekend, the Falcon volleyball team fought back and won the final two games against Eastern Michigan on Saturday to split its matches during the roadtrip to Michigan.

BG's victory over the Eagles came in five games by a score of 13-15, 15-13, 3-15, 15-11 and 15-8. After a Friday night shellacking against Central Michigan, the importance of the EMU match could not be minimized.

"I told the team it was a must-win situation," said head coach Denise Van De Walle. "Down two games to one, we finally played aggressively and with composure and did exactly what we needed to do to win."

Van De Walle said the team started flat against EMU, possibly reeling from the effects of Friday's loss in Mt. Pleasant. Then, after losing the third game 15-3, the Falcons made their comeback.

"When [the players] realized it could have been an 0-2 weekend, they stepped it up a notch," Van De Walle said. "They showed a lot of character with their backs to the wall. They could have folded, but they didn't."

The win ended a two-game losing streak in five-set matches for the Falcons, who are now 8-8 overall and tied for third in the MAC at 5-3.

Jessica Andrasko and Carlyn Esslinger led the Falcons with 21 and 20 kills, respectively. Lori Hilton contributed with seven blocks. Not many good things could be said for the Friday night performance against Central Michigan, who defeated the Falcons in three games, 15-13, 15-8 and 15-11. The undefeated Chipewas presented a difficult challenge with their swing offense, and the Falcons did not respond, Van De Walle said.

"We did not play well on Friday," she said. "I thought we played cautiously."

The defense played poorly, particularly in the blocking aspect, according to Van De Walle. That allowed the physical CMU front line the opportunity to swing away at the ball.

Shayne Crumley's play on the left side earned praise from Van De Walle. Crumley finished with 18 kills and a .250 hitting percentage in just two games.

The loss snapped a four-game winning streak for the Falcons, who continue their five-match roadtrip Saturday against rival Toledo.

League chooses Palko as top defender of the week

The Associated Press

TOLEDO -- Central Michigan running back Brian Pruitt, Miami of Ohio quarterback Neil Dougherty and Bowling Green line-backer Vince Palko have been selected as the players of the week in the Mid-American Conference.

Palko, a senior from Stow, had 12 tackles -- including a sack for a 6-yard loss -- in a 32-0 victory over Ohio U. It was the second straight shutout by the Falcons and third this season. Palko also had an interception and broke up a pass.

Dougherty, a junior from Cincinnati, completed 14-of-16 passes for 231 yards and three touchdowns.

Pruitt, a senior from Saginaw, Mich., rushed 34 times for 145 yards and three touchdowns in a 35-28 upset of previously unbeaten Western Michigan.

Blackney sets sights on Rockets

by Christian Pelusi
The BG News

Forget about the 32-0 drubbing Bowling Green gave to an over-matched Ohio University squad. Reflect on Ronnie Redd's record-setting receiving day sometime later. Talk about Courtney Davis' 108 yards on 18 carries, along with the defense's third shutout this season next week.

The mission this week is clear: beat Toledo.

"I think that Toledo is a lot more explosive than North Carolina State," said head coach Gary Blackney. Blackney is particularly concerned with the scrambling ability of Toledo quarterback Ryan Huzjak.

"The thing that concerns me is that you can have a pretty good pass rush, and you can have pretty good coverage, and all of a sudden [Huzjak's] ability to run kicks in... He's not the type of guy to go for four or five yards and hook slide. He's gonna take the ball downfield and run like a halfback," Blackney said. "He's a tough kid."

Take away Huzjak's ability to run, and the Rockets have many of the same characteristics of the Falcons.

Their use of different running backs and all receivers mirrors the style of BG.

"In terms of personnel to personnel, they have good wide receivers, we have good wide receivers. Their offensive line is experienced and mature, and our offensive line is experienced and mature. They've got a good quarterback, and we have a good quarterback.

"We haven't played anybody that has this many weapons. They spread you out all over the field and make you cover [wideouts Scott] Brunswick and [Tom] Boyd. Now [Steve] Rosi, the tight end, is a factor. In the past, the tight end hasn't been a factor. Now they're throwing to him in critical situations," Blackney said.

Blackney also mentioned the play of tailbacks Casey McBeth and Wasean Tait, even going as far as to say that the Toledo backfield pair is better than N.C. State's.

"[Toledo's offense] can come at you a lot of different ways," Blackney said. "This is going to be a real challenge for our defense. We'll find out if we are really that good. They'll test us."

That test will come Saturday night, but the preparations will be conducted all week. Team meetings will be held every day to accentuate the importance of this game and being prepared.

"This is a big game for us, and we treat it differently," Blackney said.

Women's soccer blanks Toledo

by Sean Faherty
The BG News

A first half domination, followed by a second half flurry propelled the women's club soccer team to an 8-0 thrashing of Toledo on Friday.

Seven players scored for the Falcons, who improved their record to 7-3 with the win. Amy Niehaus lead BG with two goals, both coming in a five-goal second half. Nicole Notorianni, Jamie Maridell and Kristen Nussbaumer punched in goals in the first half while Erin Rinehart, Leslie Petrich and Michelle Wernert added goals in the second half. Petrich, who was the Falcon goalie in the first half, headed in a corner kick midway through the second half.

The trouncing of the Rockets was a boost for the Falcons. "Everyone had a good game," said Nussbaumer. "It was good to kick their butts because they are our rivals. I hope we play this well next time we play them."

That "next time" will be Oct. 22, when the Falcons travel to the Glass City. The next home game for the Falcons will be Oct. 15 against Ohio State.

BG used Petrich and Kim Elton in goal for the first and second halves, respectively. Both looked more like spectators and had ample time to catch up on sleep during the game, as the Falcons spent all evening on the Toledo end of the field.

"Everyone had a good game. I hope we play this well next time we play them."

Kristen Nussbaumer
women's club soccer forward

"It's great because we played well together as a team," Rinehart said. "Our defense worked well together. Fortunately, in a game like this, we didn't have too much work to do."

Not only does the opposition have yet to win at BG, it has yet to score. The Falcons have pitched shutouts in each of their five home games.

The weekend was not without fault, however, as the Falcons fell to Miami on Saturday, 4-2, and to the Bobcats of OU on Sunday, 2-0. BG has a chance for revenge against the Redskins as they host them later this month.

Rugby team slides to third in division

by Scott Brown
The BG News

The Bowling Green rugby team came into its Saturday match with archrival Miami fired up and ready to battle the Redskins for the division title. Their bubble burst, however, before the game even started when they realized that the tiebreaker procedure had already eliminated them from the hunt.

The Falcons went on to tie the Redskins 24-24, and in the process fell all the way to third place in the division. Their customary annual appearance in the Midwest playoffs may now be in jeopardy.

"This doesn't kill us," head coach Roger Mazzarella said. "Some of the voters [in the Midwest poll] have told me that they think the top three teams in our division are the top three in the state. We still have a good chance at advancing. Now we just have to wait and see."

Mazzarella explained that it wouldn't be until next Wednesday before the team knew its fate in the Midwest playoffs. They do know their opponent in the divisional playoffs this Saturday. They face Cincinnati at 5 p.m. at Ohio State's field in Columbus.

"It really makes no difference who we play," Mazzarella said. "Miami is playing Ohio for the division title. If all three teams in our division win, we should be in the playoffs."

The Falcons go in with a 13-5-3 record overall, 1-1-1 in the division.

The Bowling Green team jumped out to a 12-0 lead only a minute and a half into the game but failed to hold the lead against the stronger Redskins. Bruce Broad and Jeff Wagner teamed up to return the opening kick-off 90 yards to set up a Brian Keith try. Jason King returned an interception 50 yards for a try, and after the conversion kick the Falcons controlled a 12-0 advantage.

Miami came storming back thanks to a strong scrum game. Trailing 24-10 in the second half, they pushed Bowling Green scrums back into the end zone twice for tries. The second tying score came in the final minute of the contest.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START
SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax-deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $138,209* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $203 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve - with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over 1.5 million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

New owner may ship Warriors out

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The unexpected sale of the Golden State Warriors to part-owner Christopher Cohan has spurred speculation that the team may be headed back to San Francisco after 22 years in Oakland.

Cohan, a cable television executive, will become sole owner of the team in January as a result of the sale announced Saturday. He had owned 25 percent of the team.

The sale apparently settles a legal battle between Cohan and Warriors co-owners Dan Finnane and Jim Fitzgerald over the ownership of the team. Lawyers for both sides were scheduled to be in San Francisco Superior Court on Tuesday to address a lawsuit filed last November by Cohan.

Cohan claimed that he purchased a 25 percent share for $21 million in 1991 with the understanding he could purchase the remainder of the team in three years.

In a statement released Saturday, Cohan maintained he had no plans to move the team out of the area, but he did not specify that the Warriors would remain at the Oakland Coliseum. In the past, the Warriors have explored the possibility of building a larger arena in Oakland, or perhaps moving the franchise across the bay to San Francisco.

"I want to assure our many fans that I am committed to keeping this team in the bay area and look forward to working with [coach] Don Nelson."

But Cohan told the San Francisco Examiner he is intrigued by the idea of joining the San Francisco Giants in a proposed sports complex.

"I'm certainly open to it," he said.
